ADDITIONAL LIFE MEMBERS ADDED TO THE PANHANDLE-PLAINS HISTORICAL SOCIETY—AMARILLO SHOWS INTEREST

PROMINENT MEN MAKE VALUABLE ADDITIONS TO THE COLLECTION OF THE SOCIETY. INDIAN AND PREHISTORIC RELICS ADDED THROUGH WORK OF EVETTS HALEY IN INTEREST OF THE SOCIETY.

J. Evetts Haley, field man for the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society, returned from Amarillo Saturday with two interesting specimens which have been donated to the Society, a fragment of the limb of some prehistoric animal, supposedly a mastodon, with a portion of the hip joint. An ivory tusk was found with the fragment of the limb, lending weight to the theory of the mastodon.

The fragment of the limb is perhaps three and one half feet long and at the hip joint is perhaps thirty-six inches in diameter. The ivory tusk is about one foot long and three and a half inches in diameter.

The fragments were presented by the Amarillo Globe, through the courtesy of Mr. W. C. Temple, of Plainview, Texas. Mr. Temple found the fragments several feet under the surface in a gravel pit.

Mr. Hal C. Randolph of Amarillo, presented the society with two pictures taken last year on the Adobe Walls site. The pictures link up with the present Adobe Walls display of the Society.

During these three days J. L. Smith, Eugene S. Blasdel, R. B. Masterson, M. C. Nobles, J. L. Simms and Miss Edna E. Haines, were enrolled as life members of the Historical Society.

Twenty-seven annual members were also added to the Society roll during this period of time. Haley was assisted by Judge Thos. F. Turner, president of the Society, and L. Gough, pioneer citizen of the Panhandle and prominent officer in the Texas Wheat Growers' Association. Haley will spend the entire summer collecting materials for the museum of the Society.

Haley reports that the people of Amarillo are showing good interest in the work of the Historical Society. The responses gained the past week are gratifying.

Many valuable articles have been added to the rapidly growing museum of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Society during the past week. Judge H. C. Randolph, of Amarillo, has given to the Society two framed pictures showing phases of the Adobe Walls celebration which was held June 27, 1924.

One of these pictures shows Andy Johnson, now of Dodge City, Kansas, as he stood leaning against the monument which marks the place where he fought fifty years ago.

R. I. Steagall, of Canyon, has loaned the Society a long braided rope made of Buffalo hide which was made by Colonel Charles Goodnight.

O. L. Coleman has put into the care of the Historical Society a large number of books, including books for children, school books, bibles, Martin Luther's sermons, and volumes of old plays, many of which are almost two hundred years old.

The Coleman collection also includes a shawl which was made in Scotland more than one hundred years ago, and two riding whips such as were used by ladies and gentlemen a half century ago.

Paul T. Vickers, of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, sent the Society an Indian Matate which is one of the finest specimens of its kind in the collection.

These articles and many others may be seen in the cases of the organization at its headquarters at the West Texas State Teachers College, Canyon, Texas.

Miss Hattie M. Anderson, honoring Miss Alma Burks, who has been teaching at Manzanola, Colorado, gave a 6 o'clock breakfast at the lighthouse on Sunday, June 7. Miss Burks received her degree from this institution last year and intends to teach at Manzanola again next term. The sunrise breakfast party consisted of Misses Stella Stanfield, Fay Lockhart, Alma Burks, Hattie Anderson, Cleo Holmes, and Mr. Lockhart.

Miss Nell Ruth Ernest of Littlefield, returned to school Wednesday to take her final examinations for the Spring term, which she was unable to do at

"MORE ROOM" IS COLLEGE'S PLEA

Is the Man Who Will Make N. E. A. Proud of Texas, Says Vice President.

President J. A. Hill, of the West Texas State Teachers College, has accepted an invitation from the National Education Association to appear on the program of that organization at its next annual meeting, June 28 to July 3.

Miss Eula F. Hunter, vice-president of the department of class-room teachers, notified President Hill of his election. In her letter Miss Hunter said, "I understand that you are the man who will make the N. E. A. proud of Texas."

The general theme of the section which Mr. Hill will address is interpreting the schools to the public. His subject will be "Growth and Development of Normal Schools into Teachers Colleges."

President Hill returned Saturday from a meeting of the Teachers College Board of Regents, which was held in Austin. At this time the President's report to the Board was made. Heads of all Teachers Colleges were present.

Other prominent educators who will appear on the N. E. A. program are Dr. George W. Frazier, of Colorado State Teachers College, and Miss Cora Wilson Stewart, director of the Kentucky Moonlight Schools.

Boys From Masonic Home at Arlington are Entertained Here

Tuesday night in the Colleke auditorium the boys' band from the Masonic Home at Arlington played a concert before a large audience of students and towns people. The band was traveling with the Grand Lodge and were the guests of the local chapter of the A. F. & A. M.

Wilber Kieth of the Dallas News, manager of the tour of the band introduced the boys and made a talk on the work of the Masonic Order in Texas, saying that the Masons of Texas were supporting six institutions at the cost annually of $3,650,000.

Julian Mosley, a member of the band, made a talk that carried with it the spirit of the boys of the band in which he told of the school and its activities, which is supported in connection with the Home, and of the opportunities offered in the Masonic Home.

Officers traveling with the party included Quinn Williams, most worshipful grand master; Wilber Kieth, executive secretary of the Masonic Service committee; Ed R. Ryan, right worshipful deputy grand master; William C. Hartfield, right worshipful junior warden; Thomas C. Churches of Canyon Are Hosts to All Students on Saturday

Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, the young people of the Presbyterian church gathered on the lawn of their church to receive the new Presbyterian students. Mrs. Shaw supervised the games; formalities were soon gone and everyone enjoyed himself. The big event of the evening was a radio program. Mr. Barnett tuned in on a band in station S. A. P. The static played havoc with the band, however, and another station was found and a bedtime story told. A negro sermon by Mr. Kunze and an orchestra directed by Mr. Strain were enjoyable numbers and closed the evenings program. Ice cream cones were served, and the crowd went home at an early hour proclaiming the party a great success.

About 200 young people enjoyed the annual reception for Summer students of the Baptist Church on the church lawn Saturday evening from 8 to 10. A short program consisting of a few speeches of appreciation of the work done in the past and that hoped for in the future from the students, was given. Then some pep songs were sung. The students were divided into groups and games were played, after which refreshments were served.

Students of the Methodist Students Federation who have stayed over from the long session entertained the incoming Methodist students at the church Saturday night. Nearly one hundred and fifty people were in attendance at this social.

As the guests arrived the girls were placed in groups according to the color of their dresses. The boys, few in number, were scattered about, the object being not to show partiality.

A country fair was presented with each group furnishing an entry. The horse races were given first place as the most original stunt.

Ice cream and cake was served as refreshments.

Similar entertainments were held at the other churches of Canyon. All report splendid attendance and co-operation.

COLLEGE PLANT IS TOO SMALL FOR GOOD WORK

CLASSES ARE OVERFLOWING INTO AUDITORIUM IN SEARCH OF ROOM.

THE NORMAL LOSES 71

"Your Nose Knows" That We Need a Science Building Now.

West Texas State Teachers College is crowded.

With every class room packed and several classes being held in the Chapel, there can be no doubt as to the accuracy of the above statement. Uncomfortable fumes originating in the Science rooms add to the realization that too many things are crowded under one roof for satisfactory work. Enrollment, at the end of the fourth day of registration, has reached 1176. This is a few more than were registered last Summer at the end of the fourth day of registration. 1156 students had enrolled at this time last Summer session. Late registration will swell the grand total over the 1200 mark.

Students of College rank numbered 828 at noon, Saturday. This is a considerable increase for a Summer term in the College rank class. Summer Normal students, accordingly, have dropped to a low mark record of 102. This loss is completely covered by the gain in the College department, showing increased interest in College work. The Sub-College department, at noon Saturday, had enrolled 101 students. The eighth, ninth, and tenth grades, in the high school division, have a total of 65 students. The Training School has 80 students in attendance.

Reports from East Texas Teachers College and North Texas Teachers College show the same parallel as between the decrease in Summer Normal students and the increase in College work being done. East Texas reports an enrollment of 1500 students, up to June 9. North Texas at Denton, reports an enrollment of 2500, on the same date. It is presumed that because of the early date of these reports that the enrollment figures are not yet complete.

Panhandle Baptists To Encamp July 14-23

Rev. B. F. Fronabarger, of Canyon, business manager of the Panhandle Baptist assembly, has about completed arrangements for the annual meeting which will take place at Ceta canyon eighteen miles from Canyon July 14th to 23rd.

Dr. H. R. Holcomb has been chosen as the preacher for the 1925 session. Dr. C. L. Yates, of Amarillo, is president of the Panhandle organization. The W. M. U. of the Panhandle will have a special session Thursday, July 16th. The last day of the assembly will be Wayland College day, Thursday, July 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Williamson, of Amarillo, will have charge of all the music during this year's meeting. Hundreds of prominent Baptists from this section of the state own lots on the assembly camping grounds and cottages are being erected to be used during the annual meeting time and other times during the year. A spacious tabernacle accommodates the great audiences that gather during the July encampment. Swimming and hiking offer recreation between the seasons during the meet.

Buffalo Band Plays at Happy

Prof. C. E. Strain and twenty members of the Buffalo band left at 8:30 this morning for Happy where they will furnish music for an all day celebration. The business men of our neighboring town are sponsoring a typical West Texas celebration in a free barbecue, an all day picnic, and a trades day. The personnel and the instrumentation of the band could not be obtained, but Prof. Strain is taking sixteen letter men and three or four new men. The trip was made via Tonte Suite.

ATTITUDES

Do you know the person who thinks this the poorest place to attend school that can be found on the face of the Educational earth? We all do. The question should be, are you one of them? And there is that other type, "The School is all right, but the town, ough!" Are you one of that class?

The boy who breathes a long sigh of relief when school is out in the Spring, and yearns to be back home, can usually be found two weeks later lamenting the fact that his parents make him do so much work! Many persons who talk of Canyon as they would a whistling post on a branch line railroad, live in towns of much smaller size, and having advantages and improvements that are minor in comparison. We would not have you think that we are unduly critical. We have stated the situation coldly and stripped it of any alleviating adjectives which might conceal our meaning.

We think that truly, "life is what you make it." We believe sincerely that discontent is, in many cases, a thing of morbid mind, rather than of irksome environment. The worn ideal of what school should be has been changed by time and the influence of the students. Nevertheless, school is yet the "Mill of learning," it is yet a place for the acquirement of knowledge instead of the attainment of social ambitions. The person who attends this college or any other without the true ideal of Education in mind loses, not only a rarely recurring opportunity; he loses self-development along the lines that can be transformed into hard cash. Perhaps there is no royal road to success, yet we are earnest in believing that there is an easier road than that of social standing and participation in the social whirlpool day after day with the regularity of a cuckoo in the clock.

Supposing that the discontent—thank heavens it is not prevalent—is not a thing of mental imagery. Granting that the environment is not exactly conducive to your entire satisfaction; there remains what should be your first thought—scholastic perfection.

Whether it be a long hill, or a short hill, a short tumble or a long slide to the door of success it is not opened so often by the "magic" of social prestige as by the force of acquired ability. Facts, concrete things, which can be laid on the table, are more pleasing to the successful business man than an applicant's ability to dance, or to entertain his daughter.

Divide your time wisely. Include social activities, for the complete man can not be without them. Yet, your margin should be of truer worth, a margin which can be laid on the table, when you strike the man who demands the goods.

YOUR BEST FRIEND

I guess its' not the color
Of your best friend's hair;
I guess its not the fancy things
You see your best friend wear.
That makes you know your best friend
When you meet him by the way,
That makes you thrill with gladness
At the things you hear him say.

I reckon its the sympathy
You see shining in his eyes;
The way his hand touches yours
In a knowing sort o' wise;
The way his lips just part in smilin's
Just to let you know real plain,
That he's with you in your losin'
Just as strong as in your gain.

I guess its not the limousine
He takes you spinnin' in;
I guess its not his worldly fame
That makes you know your friend,
No, that's not the kind o' friend
You love your whole life long,
Its the one who packs away his grouch,
And sings for you his song.

They Both See Their Duty and Do It!

REFLECTIONS

Teachers all over the nation will rejoice that the Supreme Court has held the "Oregon School Law" to be unconstitutional. This law required all normal children in the State between the ages of eight and sixteen to attend public schools. This law was aimed at private and parochial schools, and, if enforced, would have meant their abolition. No one doubts the wisdom of maintaining public school systems, but to deprive a parent of the privilege of sending his child to a private school is an infringement on personal liberty that harks back to medieval times. If there is any such thing as liberty in this country, parents should certainly have the right to choose the school their children are to attend.

All modern detective stories are out-rivalled by the unearthing of the evidence as to who was responsible for the murder of Christopher Marlowe, famous playwright and contemporary of Shakespeare. Until recently, Marlowe's death has been an unsolved mystery in the annals of literature. Now Dr. Hotson, of Harvard, has discovered documents proving conclusively how Marlowe met his death, and who killed him. This, some three centuries after the crime! Can you match this bit of detective work in fiction? If you are interested in knowing how Dr. Hotson succeeded in unravelling the mystery, read his account in the Literary Digest of June 13.

For two successive weeks one of our Panhandle newspapers has carried an editorial condemning the teaching of printing in schools and colleges. The writer of these editorials takes the position that printing is not a success as a school subject because the students do not show practical ability as printers after having completed the course. If we are to accept the criticism of printing as a school subject because it lacks a practical or utilitarian value, then our whole curriculum must be revised. Does History, or Literature, or Geography, have a utilitarian value for the average student? As a matter of fact, how many of our curriculum subjects do have? Mr. Editor, if you criticize printing, why not add to your list most of the other subjects taught in academic courses?

Even though students who study printing in schools do not become professional printers, we believe that studying printing does perform valuable service in helping to educate those who study it. It gives the student valuable training in mechanical English—spelling, punctuation, sentence structure, etc. It teaches him due regard for form, arrangement, and appearance of manuscript and printed matter. It inculcates habits of care and precision. It gives him a great deal of training in motor skill; setting type and feeding a press develops, to a marked degree, the coordination of mind and muscle. Setting type also increases the student's vocabulary and gives him an appreciation of vigorous, clean-cut composition. If any of these qualities have a place in a young man's training, printing will help to teach them. And he need not become a professional printer to profit from them!

The college is off to one of the most successful summer sessions in its history. Lack of classroom space is the only apparent difficulty. Certainly the administration can not be blamed for this, as every possible effort has been made to obtain an appropriation from the state to enlarge the school plant. Those who have followed these efforts know that the last legislature approved an appropriation, for a new building and that the governor vetoed this appropriation. As a result, W. T. S. T. C. will continue to work under the handicap of crowded conditions. An institution devoted to the important work of training teachers should not be so handicapped, and friends of the college are determined to see that adequate facilities shall be provided in the near future.

KAMPUS KRUMS

BY NULL & VOID

With this issue Kampus Krums makes its bow to the students. We don't mind admitting, without the least bit of ego, that Null & Void are the best writers we know of and first of all we want to congratulate the editor upon his selection of us. In fact, we think we are clever to think up the scheme of substituting a K for a C. It is the purpose of this column to make fun and be made fun of. After looking over the new students we are of the opinion that much fun will be forthcoming.

"Have you registered yet?"

"Have I?" answered the tired looking stude, sans collar, sans tie and sans cuff buttons. "Have I? Well, I've been deloused, had my picture taken, answered nine hundred four thousand questions, told five thousand lies, been checked up four times, read nine catalogs and five programs, and have run up and down the steps twelve times. However I think I shall be able to register to-morrow."

Scandal! The Bachelor's Protective Association is no more and the dainty pitter-patter of feminine feet is heard within the walls of the once private sanatorium where females dared not tread. And what is worse, the man who was to have been the next president is now squirming within the artful clutches of love's eternal net. What are the poor, lonely, men to do now? There, Aunt Sue, answer that if you can.

"I didn't know before I came here that this was a 6 to 1 college," mused the bright lad.

AUNT SUE--

(Write her concerning questions of dress, affairs of the heart, campus courtesies, etc.)

Dear Aunt Sue:

Last winter I brought three of my students to Canyon to spend a week end with me. While here we went on an inspection tour through the building. They simply "took in" everything. One of the boys was interested in the piece of statuary in the main hall. He asked me more questions about it than I could begin to answer. I made up my mind, however, that I would find out about it and pass all of my information on when I go back to teach next year. Will you help me? I am ashamed to admit, even to you, Aunt Sue, that I don't know what the statue is called.

—One Who Wants to Know.

Answer:

The Winged Victory in the hall is the likeness of a statue which the Greeks erected to commemorate the victory of Demetrius over Ptolemy's fleet before Salamis on the island of Cyprus in 306 B. C. From your general history you will remember that Cyprus was in the possession of Ptolemy. Demetrius, a loyal Greek, undertook to reclaim the island. The Greek people were fond of erecting statues in honor of events worth noting; so Demetrius' victory afforded the sculptors an opportunity to design a statue that would most fittingly commemorate a military success.

Now success in war was always accredited to Nike, the goddess of Victory. It was but natural then that her statue should be set up in memory of the occasion. The sculptor represented the goddess standing on the prow of a vessel. She carried the frame work of a trophy in her left hand, and in her right she held a trumpet close to her lips.

In the original to-day the head and arms are missing. The partial destruction came during the time of the Roman conquest of Greece. For years the statue lay in ruins and when the explorers succeeded in unearthing the pieces the head and arms were never recovered.

In spite of these losses an atmosphere of action envelopes the figure. Walk to the left of the statue sometime and see if you cannot detect motion in every wind-swept line.

The Winged Victory was first placed on the island of Samothrace; hence the name Nike, the "Winged Victory of Samothrace."

I am glad you asked for this bit of information. Perhaps someone else can make use of it too.

—Aunt Sue.

P. S. Be sure to tell your students that the Winged Victory should never be used for a hat rack.

Dear Aunt Sue:

I am past 21 (several years in fact), and I have been taking care of myself for a long time. Now that I have made up my mind to change my boarding place someone tells me that I must get permission before making the change. Think of it! Have I been correctly informed concerning this regulation?

Answer:

I believe the rules and regulations say that ALL young ladies should consult the Dean of Women before moving from one boarding place to another. I feel quite confident that you are capable of taking care of yourself and I am sure you have a very good reason for wishing to move; however, some people "are not" and "have not." Do you get the point? For the sake of these people general regulations must be adhered to by everyone. Rules formed to suit the temperament of each individual might be ideal, but wouldn't they be terribly troublesome to enforce? I wonder: have I made myself clear?

—Aunt Sue.

Dear Aunt Sue:

I met a boy during registration week who lives about fifty miles from my home town. He has asked for two dates each week this summer. I don't know what to say to him. My brother knows the boy and likes him.

J. L. G.

Answer:

Why encourage a monopoly? You may find out in a week or two that he is not the only boy here. Two engagements a week are enough for any school girl; so when do the other poor fellows come in? The best man should win. You are the judge, aren't you?

—Aunt Sue.

My dears, think of it! The editor has said, "No more space this week, Aunt Sue," and I have disposed of only three letters from the stack on my desk. What shall I do? If you will be patient I will come to your letter next. I am answering them in the order received.

Good bye until next week.
YOUR AUNT SUE.
