394 NEW STUDENTS ENROLLED IN NORMAL

Best That Texas Has, Coming to The West Texas State Normal College

There are 394 students who are here for their first time. These 394 young men and young women represent the best from their respective communities. And this means the best that Texas has, for they come from all parts of the state. The student body feels that it has a valuable asset in so many young people fresh from the active walks of life. They bring us new ideas and infuse our minds with new hopes and aspirations. The ease with which they have adapted themselves to their new environment is a prophesy rich in content. We are glad to have them among us. We hope the time that they spend here will be most pleasant as well as most profitable.

Their names follow:

NEW STUDENTS' EDITION

The Girls' Forum

What the old Roman Forum meant to the citizens of Rome we have tried to make the Girls' Forum mean to the girls of the "W. T. S. N. C." We want it to be a place where the girls of the school can come together with a feeling of oneness and discuss matters of vital interest and importance to them. We want it to be a place where the "sisterhood" of women may be truly realized. We want it to be a place where the highest ideals of thought and conduct may be upheld.

The Forum had an auspicious beginning on Wednesday of last week when the first meeting of the session was held. Miss Mary Smith Clark, the summer president of the Y. W. C. A., presented the program of the Y. W. C. A. for the summer. The plan of each girl's receiving a fern and of thus entering a growing contest at the initiation service was enthusiastically received by the girls. As acting chairman and editor-in-chief of the Handbook, Miss Sarah Thompson presented the Handbook to the new students and briefly outlined the work of the Forum. A nominating committee was appointed to nominate officers for the summer. At the next meeting, officers will be elected and the work of the Forum will begin in earnest.

The Home Economics Club

Among our various clubs and societies, possibly the Home Economics Club stands apart from the rest in the nature of its aim and purpose. This club is made up of Domestic Science students only. The club was first organized as the Ellen H. Richards Club, so named because of the interest and the love, as well as the knowledge, this woman has given the girls of our department. Later the club was called the Home Economics Club, and it is by this name that it is now known.

The chief events of this last year were our social meetings and the demonstration of the ways and customs of foreign peoples. The most important thing we did was to help establish a chair of the Domestic Science Department in the American School at Constantinople.

Our motto is: "The Life of Home and of What the Home stands for converts the drudgery of daily routine into a high order of social service." This will help you to realize what we stand for. It will also help you to see why all of the girls that married this last year were members of the Home Economics Club.

Our plans for this summer are the working out of the light house-keeping problem in Canyon, and the proper dress for the college girl. All the new students of the Home Economics Department are urged to join us.

Seniors Organize

The Seniors met last Wednesday for the purpose of organizing the class for the summer. The following officers were elected:

President—Lester Hill.
Vice President—Lucille Kennedy.
Secretary—Mary Smith Clark.
Chairman of Social Committee—Minnie Gray Smith.

There was a large number of Seniors present, and a good deal of pep was evident at this meeting. They are planning to have some jolly times this summer as well as to burn midnight oil. If you are a Senior, show your colors. Watch the bulletin board for the next meeting.

Orange Blossoms

Mr. Henry M. Baker, an alumnus of this institution, was married to Miss Cleo Grundy at Newlin, Texas, on June 17.

Miss Sallie Belle Brown, a former student of ours, and Dr. R. D. English of Snyder, were married on June 3. Mrs. English will be remembered as an active worker in the Y. W. C. A. and as a delegate to the Y. W. C. A. convention at Estes Park, Colorado.

Miss Mary Bradford and Mr. W. C. Black were married at the bride's home in Canyon on June the ninth.

Announcements have been received of the wedding of Miss Vivvian Cannon, a former student of W. T. S. N. C., to Mr. Wilkinson.

Miss Alice Hill has returned to her home at Moody, after a visit at the home of her brother, J. A. Hill.

Pres. Hill and Mr. L. G. Allen will leave soon for Salt Lake City, where they will attend the National Educational Association.

Mr. Morelock has just returned from an educational rally at Olton, where he delivered an address.

General B. F. Looney Speaks at Auditorium

Attorney General B. F. Looney, candidate for Governor of Texas, addressed a large assembly of students and visitors in the college auditorium Tuesday morning. He reviewed briefly his record as a member of the legislature, citing some laws and bills that he had introduced and assisted in passing.

These are three outstanding problems which he discussed: tax laws, economical government, and rescuing the public schools from collapse.

He reminded us that for twenty years the state had not been restricted into senatorial districts, and hence an injustice has been done to the West; he said that if he were elected governor, he would endeavor to have the state redistricted so that all sections would have "entitled representation in congress."

General Looney passed over the woman suffrage and prohibition questions as subjects which did not need discussion, since the woman suffrage question is practically settled, and his former record as a strong advocate of prohibition shows his position on that subject.

He pointed out a glaring defect in the suffrage law, namely, that the government as a whole has not paid due consideration to the assimilation of foreign people. Foreigners have been allowed to live in separate communities and to speak their native language. The recent war brought us to a realization of these conditions when we found that among many foreigners there was no response to the call for service. At present foreigners are allowed to vote after they take out their first paper; General Looney is in favor of withholding the vote from foreigners until they are full fledged citizens.

He stated that all questions hang on revenue. He furthermore added that some radical reforms are needed. The constitution provides for equal taxation, but no two counties adopt the same basis of valuation, and hence some counties pay more than others. There is much property escaping taxation while other property is bearing the burden of taxation for all.

There are several routes which may serve as a remedy for this evil; the one General Looney considers best is the formation of a central tax authority—a state board of equalization which will have power over local tax officers. When this central power equalizes taxes between the counties, we will be approaching the uniformity and equality which the constitution demands.

General Looney is an educational enthusiast, and is strongly in favor of building up the teaching profession to such an extent that people can afford to make it a life work. The speaker stated that last year 33 1-3 percent of the teachers left the school room, and it is thought that 50 percent will leave next year unless something is done. "Our republic must be enlightened in order to render it immune to the criticism of foreign countries. Last year 1500 rural schools were without teachers. What would become of the other professions if 33 1-3 percent of its members should retire? They would not be worth the name. This is true of the teaching profession. We must build up the profession in order to build up the schools," says General Looney. He believes that there should be a poll tax on all inhabitants (not male citizens alone) for the school funds; it is his intention to assist in passing a law to that effect.

He is also in favor of separating the A. & M. College and the State University.

Miss Terrill Entertains

On Wednesday evening, June 23, Miss Ada Terrill entertained a number of her friends, giving an informal dance in honor of Miss Virginia Hanna of Galveston, Texas.

Delicious fruit punch was served throughout the evening. The guests were: Misses Virginia Hanna, Margaret Guenther, Marcillette Hall, Arlene Park, Elise Hall, Helen Howard Ira Cochran, Dorothy Burrow and Ora Wilson. Mesdames Spencer, Word, Biecher, Blaine and Donald, Messrs. Biecher, Al Stafford, Herman Glass, Rector Lester, William Younger, Ben Terrill, Bob Donald, Pat Ellison, Dick Oliver, Henry Gamble, Odel Carlton and George Ingham.

Miss A. Graham is spending a few days in Dallas.

The Y. M. C. A. Conference at Hollister, Mo.

Over two hundred young men and fifty faculty members and leaders from Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, and Oklahoma, attended the Students' Y. M. C. A. Conference, June 11-21, at Hollister, Mo. The students and faculty of the West Texas State Normal subscribed sufficient funds to send four students to represent our institution in this conference. The men selected were: Dan Sanders, Gary Simms, Harper Allen and Wesley Allen. These men are members of the Y. M. C. A. cabinet for next year, and were sent to the conference for special training for their work. Prof. Fred H. Ives, was also invited to attend the conference at the expense of the State Y. M. C. A. office.

Hollister is on Lake Taneycomo, White River, in the heart of the Ozark Mountains. The beautiful bluffs, woods, and river made up an inspiring environment for the conference, and also furnished excellent facilities for recreation during the time available for that purpose. The camp is the permanent property of the Y. M. C. A.

Training for leadership was the chief purpose of the conference; and to that end, a full program was arranged. Some of the chief speakers were: Dr. W. A. Foster, Dr. Harry Ward, Dr. Bruce Curry Jr., all of New York; Dr. J. R. Little of Louisville; Mr. Anderson, Mr. Hurry, and other returned missionaries from South America, China and Japan; Mr. A. R. Elliott, St. Louis; Mr. Bruce Baker, Houston; and Mr. J. A. Erhard, Dallas. Regular classes were held for Bible Study, Association Methods, Life Work, and Public Questions. These men are all leaders of national and international reputation in their lines of work. As a result of their discussions and lectures, our representatives have made complete plans for the Y. M. C. A. work here next year, and have the enthusiasm and determination necessary to put these plans through.

Each day of the conference had a regular scheduled program from 6:15 A. M. to 9:30 P. M. From 1:30 to 5:30 each afternoon was free for recreation. Each state delegation had a base ball team, and games were played off until Texas had the championship. Dan Sanders and Gary Simms made the all state team which defeated the Hollister town team. Tennis, basket ball, boating, swimming, and hiking were all popular sports. One very interesting side trip was to Powersite, by lake boat. Powersite is a great water-plant, which furnishes electric current to Joplin and Springfield, and other cities. Another trip was made to Marvel cave, a wonderful formation in the Ozark limestone, extending four hundred seventy feet underground and having great rooms and dozens of winding passages. The explorer feels that he is traveling into the bowels of the earth by candle light. The road from the Y. M. C. A. camp to the cave reaches all points mentioned in "The Shepherd of the Hills," by Harold Bell Wright.

Texas had more representatives, more schools, and more spirit than any other state delegation at the conference. All who attended were brought to a higher appreciation and clearer conception of their opportunity and duty as Christian men. We must send five men to the conference next year.

Home Economics Club Entertains New Members

The Home Economics Club entertained the new students of this Department in the dining room on Thursday, June 24, from five to six P. M. Misses Bernice Parker, Ruth Cleveland, Bernice McGeehe, and Helen Evans served tea-punch and wafers to the following members: Merle McLemore, Mabel Lemons, Myrtle Voules, Mary L. Chambers, Decie Greer, Novella Forrest, and Mary J. Selborne. Other guests were: President J. A. Hill, L. G. Allen, L. S. Baker, B. A. Stafford Jr., B. F. Sisk, L. F. Sheffy, F. E. Savage, Travis Shaw, Reta Baldwin, Lizzie Kate Smith, Esther Griffin, and Mary Smith Clark.

Miss Arlene Park of Amarillo entered school at Canyon Monday.

Miss Rambo went to Colorado last week to attend a Home Economic convention.

Alma Guenther, who has been in Amarillo for an operation for appendicitis, has returned home and is improving rapidly.

The Y. W. C. A.

Last week, the Young Women's Christian Association began a membership campaign in which three hundred seventy-five new members were added to the organization. If you have not joined this association, you are urged to do so before Wednesday, June 30.

"The purpose of the Young Woman's Christian Association in the Summer School is to interpret on this Normal Campus the principles of Jesus Christ, principles of beauty, of friendliness of truth and justice and honor, of unselfishness and service. Every girl who will pledge allegiance to such principles may become a member—"It is my purpose to live a true follower of the Lord Jesus Christ," is her statement of purpose."

The Y. W. C. A. is planning to organize the different boarding houses so they may contest for championship in sports, such as mumble peg, base ball, basket ball, sack-races, croquet, tennis, swimming, and suit-case races. A loving cup will be awarded the boarding house receiving the highest number of points. Hikes, swimming and fishing parties, sunrise breakfasts, teas, and story hours are among the good times the Y. W. C. A. is planning.

All members are requested to take part in the Initiation Service Wednesday evening at six thirty. Each member will be presented with a tiny fern for the "growing contest" which will end near the close of the summer term. Everyone is cordially invited to attend the service.

Modern Drama Presented by the Devereux Players

The series of plays given last week by the Devereux Players scored a notable success, despite railroad connections and unfavorable weather conditions. The company is somewhat smaller than last winter, as they are presenting only modern drama during the summer and fewer actors are required. Four plays were given, representing distinct types, and the appropriate atmosphere and quality of each were well sustained.

"The Romancers," by Rostand, might be called a dramatic trifle of exquisite workmanship and its treatment in the hands of the Devereux Players was delicate and graceful. The translation used was not the prose version familiar to many of us, but a poetic translation belonging to the company, and so truly poetic that little of the original beauty is lost. The "struggle," primarily between the excessive romanticism of extreme youth and the selfishness of old age and suddenly diverted into the secondary struggle between the two young lovers on the one hand, and the two old cronies on the other, was extremely pleasing. Having been caught up at the beginning of the first act into an atmosphere as essentially romantic as it was essentially French, one felt a comfortable assurance that all would be well and the lovers live "happily forever afterwards." Not the least of the excellencies which made this a delightful production was the poetic reading of the lines—a quality too rare on the American stage. If at times the audience failed to hear the more delicate passages, it was the fault rather of the acoustic properties of the auditorium than of the actors. To the discriminating, however, the lack was partly filled by significant action and tone—the "long line" of romantic quality.

The three one-act plays by Dunsany are of the ultra-modern type whose purpose is to produce, thru appeal to the eye and to the ear,—by other means than articulate speech, as well as by means of the lines,—a unity of impression. This was especially evident in "A Night at an Inn," in which the tragic mood was intensified mainly by the effect of movement and pure sound,—the stealthy crawling of the dark men one by one into the room,—the long knife between the teeth—and the dull, heavy, measured step of the Indian god.

"But he spake no word; Which set the horror higher."

The role of Scott-Fortesque, played by Mr. Devereux, was remarkable in its expression of strong mentality and unscrupulousness. With apparent ease he projected the idea which produced the sense of impending doom in the speech concerning the superstition and the unrelenting persistence in pursuit of "men like that." The entire effect produced a sense of Fate as inevitable and relentless as that which set the horror higher.

APPROPRIATION OF $58,060 FOR NORMAL

Special Session of Legislature Passes Educational Appropriation Bill Friday

The appropriation bill as passed by the special session of the legislature carries an appropriation of $58,060 for the West Texas State Normal College. This sum is apportioned as follows:

Salary increase, average of 20 per cent.....	$20,500
New teachers and other employees.....	$18,060
Departments as follows:
Agriculture.....	$5000
Art.....	$1000
Physics.....	$1000
Home Economics.....	$500
Manual Training.....	$800
Expression.....	$300
Phis. Edu.....	$400
Additional Furniture for Dormitory.....	$5,000
Infirmary.....	$2,000
Repairs, printing, etc.....	$3,500

Total.....$58,060

The infirmary covered by the appropriation will be opened next fall. It will be in charge of a trained nurse, who has already been employed.

Two new teachers have recently been added to the English faculty, Miss Elizabeth Davis and Mrs. Lang. Miss Davis came to the college last spring from Peabody, and was given a permanent position last week. Mrs. Lang is here for the first time this summer. She holds an A. B. degree from Trinity University, and has studied one year at Columbia.

Girls' Council at Huntleigh Hall

The girls of Huntleigh Hall organized a Council last week. After the election of officers, the following committees were appointed: Social, Hostess, and Music. Miss Abbie Graham made a short talk on the girls' duties in the halls, dining-room courtesies, etc.

The Council met on the "East Lawn" on June 14 for a Get-acquainted Party. Miss Lucille Kennedy, chairman of the social committee, and her officers entertained the girls with interesting and lively games. The girls were divided into the east and west wings, representing two families—the Jones and Smith families. These two challenged each other for a Catch a Train race. The "Joneses" were as well trained in such races as the "Smiths"; so the race proved a tie between the two. After hearty laughs and chats the families paired off and marched by the lemonade stand, where they were served with lemonade and cake. The girls gave the hostess committee fifteen cheers for the delightful evening.

Boys' Forum to Give Program

Last Tuesday the boys met in room 105 for the purpose of discussing the nature of the society work to be undertaken this summer. It was decided to leave the societies unorganized for the summer term and to have a Boys' Forum instead.

In some respects this organization will resemble a literary society, but will reach a larger part of the student body.

The following officers were elected: President—Robert Hill.
Vice President—D. T. Tarlton.
Secretary—Elmer Hawkins.

A program committee was appointed, which prepared the following program to be rendered Thursday, June 24, at 7:30 P. M.

1. Aim of this organization—Mr. Woodridge.

2. Who should be nominated at the Democratic National Convention. McAdoo—C. R. Wilson.

Wilson—J. E. Dockery.

Cox—D. T. Tarlton.

Bryan—Mr. McDaniel.

Edwards—Mr. Holt.

Hoover—A. L. Burnett.

3. Comical School Happenings—Mr. Vaughn.

Every young man is cordially invited to be present. Come and get acquainted with your neighbor.

—Randall County News.

Relation of New Students to the Institution

There are 394 students who have enrolled for their first session in the West Texas State Normal College this summer. They have come to a new community and a strange environment. Whatever may have been their experiences in the past, they cannot be fully familiar with the policies and traditions of the institution; they cannot fathom immediately the deep significance of the things about them.

An effort to interpret the institution to them would be futile. Such appreciation does not come from explanation. It comes from living contact with the Alma Mater—from the constant breathing of the atmosphere that prevades her halls. Therefore, as a means of helping new students to find their places in the institution, we can only suggest some of the means by which they may early bring themselves into harmony with the great whole.

There are two simple principles that may be taken as a guide. If he follow them honestly, the new student will soon be at home in the institution. First, keep in mind that you are part of the institution; second, get acquainted with as many people as possible.

You are a Part of the College
From the day that you first enroll, you are a part of the institution—as much so as any student here. You are entitled to as many benefits and subject to as many responsibilities. That this fact has not been generally realized is shown by the tendency of students newly enrolled to assume the role of spectators for the first quarter or so. This is especially true with reference to student activities. The activities are here as much for the new students as the old; and they would not have you deny them the inspiration of your support, nor yourselves the benefits that come from participation.

Take an active part in all that is going on. Pay your blanket tax and attend the numbers that are covered by it. Support the publications; contribute to the "Prairie." Find out all you can about the student organizations, and join any that especially appeal to you. Go to your class meetings and take an active part in its transactions. Put yourself at the disposal of the student body for any duties that they might lay upon you. All of these things do with zeal if you would get the most from your college career.

Get Acquainted With Everybody You Can

If you take part in the various student activities you will be brought into contact with large numbers of students and will form many pleasant and lasting friendships. But you should also make a conscious and deliberate effort to get acquainted with as many people as possible. You will not find it hard to make acquaintances. The atmosphere of this school is decidedly democratic. Here you will find exemplified all the traditions of Western democracy and hospitality. The old students are interested in you. They are here for essentially the same purpose for which you have come. They are eager to know you and to make friends with you. Give them a chance.

By keeping in mind that you are a part of the institution, and making it a point to get acquainted with everybody you can, you will soon find your place in the college community. You will soon breathe the atmosphere and catch the spirit of the institution. Then Loyalty, service, and all the traditions of the school will be reflected in your conduct.

Why Not Contribute to the Prairie?

The "Prairie" is a paper of the students, by the students, and for the students. It belongs to the student body, and every member is part owner of the "Prairie." The "Prairie" will be what the student body as a whole makes it. Indifference on their part will result in loose contact between the paper and student life. Failure on their part to contribute generously will mean that the paper must be filled with material not coming directly from the student life itself. Enthusiasm and effort on the part of the student body mean individual enthusiasm and effort. This will never come about if each student waits for some one else to take the initiative.

Have you ever submitted anything for publication? Or have you always waited for some one else? Why not write a short-story, poem, editorial, or some article of a general nature?

Why Not Organize a County Club

Many of the new students have already made numbers of friends among their college associates. But few students, old or new, cultivate the habit of making friendships to the extent they should. It is a more or less hackneyed saying that the chief thing in a college career is not the things that we learn directly from books, but the associations that we form. If this is true, the student who derives the most benefit from his college life will be the one who, in addition to pursuing his courses, finds the greatest number of friends.

The summer session is so short that we do not have time to become acquainted with the entire student body. But we can get acquainted with large numbers of our fellows. One of the best means of facilitating friendship is through county clubs. Some counties are represented here by as many as twenty or thirty students. In such cases a club should be all means be maintained. Where one county does not have sufficient membership for a club, several neighboring counties might be taken.

In another column there appears a list of the new students with their addresses. See how many are from your section; make it a point to get acquainted with them; and if you see fit, organize a club.

Types of New Students

By the term "new student" is usually meant the fellow who enrolls for the first time in an institution. He is new to the student body, to the faculty, to the library, and to the ideals of the institution. These "new students" may be divided into two classes: boys and girls who have never been to college, and boys and girls who come to us from other colleges. Both classes need the help of old students, familiar with all the best their alma mater has to offer. The fellow who has never been to college suddenly finds himself in a strange land, as it were, where people hurry to appointed tasks, disregardful of his bewildered state of mind. He saunters into the library only to find a seemingly confused array of books and magazines. In the class room and on the campus no one appears to recognize his importance; he feels that he has lost that prestige he enjoyed in his home school and community. As a result of this feeling, he develops a genuine case of "home-sickness;" he wants to go back home where friends will greet him at every turn, and where those who know him will pay due regard to his worth. But he forgets that by his side in the class room there are many others who share his feelings and long for some kind of relief. Old students can help this class of new students by getting acquainted with them, by showing them about the building, by inviting them to join the different organizations of the institution organized for their welfare, and by inviting them to church and Sunday School with them. Many new students lose much valuable time because they do not find their place early enough in the new order of life about them. They are too timid to ask about things in which they are vitally interested. As a result, they take whatever offers itself, "and try to be content."

The other class of new students is a little different. They come to us from other colleges, different in many ways from our own college. They may have much that would be good for us. But our institution has its own ideals, and we as students should seek every opportunity to impress these ideals upon all who come to us.

Why Pay the Blanket Tax?

It has been rumored that a few students have not paid the Blanket Tax. The Board of Regents has said that all students shall pay this tax. Under this order the Blanket Tax becomes a fee, just like the registration fee, and should be paid at the same time as the enrollment fee. The money paid into this fund is used exclusively for the purpose of providing attractions for the student body. For the sum of $2.00 students this summer will derive the following benefits: (a) Subscription to "The Prairie." This is your college paper, the official mouthpiece of the student body. It undertakes to voice your convictions upon that life of which you are a vital part; it seeks to put into permanent form all your most important achievements. You are helping to make the history of a great institution. Later in life, would you not like to read an account of the part you played in its making? Do you believe in a good college paper? Do you believe in your alma mater, whose future is linked inseparably with your own life? Are you willing to contribute the best there is in you to an organ whose sole purpose is to further your own interests? (b) The Blanket Tax, also, provides five educational motion picture shows for this summer. Two of these you have already seen; the others yet to be shown ought to be equally as good as the first two. These five performances would cost you at least $1.00.

(c) Doctor Harding of the University of Arkansas is to give five lectures on different phases of scientific subjects. He comes to us highly recommended. Surely his lectures will be worth 20 cents each to you. At this low figure you have to your advantage an additional dollar. (d) But these attractions are not all you get for $2.00. The well known Zoellner Quartet is to be with us. For this attraction alone you would have to pay at least $1.00. Now, add these sums and see what you are getting for an investment of $2.00 only. I am sure that your sense of fairness will tell you that you are paying for these attractions not more than 50 cents on the dollar. Should you argue that you do not desire any attractions for the summer, I submit that you will more than likely spend the sum of at least $2.00 on motion picture shows before the summer is over.

Personal Contact With the Faculty

New Students! Why did you come to Canyon? Oh, I know these English teachers have been asking for various and sundry themes on this very subject. And you have told them that you came to gain certain certificates and degrees. That you have come because you have friends here, because it was close to your home, because the climate was delightful.

But you have also come to make new friends. Often friendships formed in college last thru a lifetime; and even if the tie itself is broken, the influence and inspiration of those friendships will hold. However, in making these friendships you must choose, for "verily a man is known by the company he keeps." It is well if possible to choose these friends from people who are our superiors not only in fortune but in attainments and personality; for in doing so, unless we become toadies, we are sure to put forth every effort to become their equals.

There is one class of people here at Canyon whom no student should fail to know. Among them are not only some of the best minds in Texas but also some of the most charming and interesting of personalities. To this class belong the members of the faculty.

Perhaps you do not appreciate the opportunity you have, but if you had ever attended a big northern college where the teachers are ineligious gods to be bowed down to, feared and revered, but never approached on an equal footing, you would understand the privilege which is yours, that of living on the same plane with greatness.

Many of the members of the faculty have studied in the largest educational institutions of the country; they have travelled and had many other broadening experiences. And yet they are human beings who would love to know you if you will let them. You will regret it if you do not cultivate the friendship of the members of the faculty.

Modern Drama Presented

of the old Greek tragedy, and at the same time—so inter-related are such notions—recalled to memory the biblical line: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

"Fame and the Poet" is a brief dramatic sketch satirizing the modern aspects of fame. Miss Graf's work brought out the value of the unexpected in producing the desired effect—that "picture of life which is also a judgment."

"The Tents of the Arabs" was the most beautiful of the three, and here again the excellent reading of the lines was one of the chief charms. The camel-drivers struck the keynote in the opening speeches and throughout the play the oriental atmosphere, steeped in those essential qualities of romanticism—strangeness and beauty—was maintained.

"Arms and the Man," a comedy by Shaw, in which the romantic attitude toward war is under satiric fire, gave excellent opportunity to all of the actors. In this play one realized for the first time the remarkable balance of the company. As Captain Bluntschli, Mr. Devereux did his most artistic work, and it is safe to say that all who saw the characterization will recall it with the vividness of a life impression. Miss Graf in the role of Raina was as charmingly absurd as the dramatist intended Raina to be. Miss Allen showed rare promise in the splendid acting role of Louka, while Miss Scott was eminently convincing as Catherine. Major Petkoff and Major Saranoff were well acted by Messrs Bennett and Forde, and Mr. Manderville was Nicola himself.

The last play of the series, "Her Husband's Wife," a farce-comedy by Thomas, may perhaps the greatest "hit" of all. Miss Graf was at her best in the difficult title-role, that of a woman with no sense of humor. Mr. Devereux did some fine acting in an amusing drunken scene in the last act. The part of "Uncle John," cleverly played by Mr. Edmund Forde, was an excellent foil for the "Wife." The contrast between the viewpoint of these two characters caused the absurdities to stand out with illuminating brilliancy, forcing the beholder to think while he laughed. Again Miss Scott and Mr. Steven did convincing work.

Altogether, it was a rare source of inspiration to the people of our town and college, and we hope to have it repeated again—and yet again.

Trips to Other Worlds, July 26-30

Are Mars and the other planets inhabited? What keeps the sun hot and where is it at midnight? Why are some stars red and others blue? What is the earth? These are a few of the questions to be answered in a series of five illustrated lectures entitled "Trips to Other Worlds," which will be given at the College Auditorium by Dr. A. M. Harding, Professor of Mathematics at the University of Arkansas.

The lectures will be illustrated by several hundred lantern slides showing telescopic photographs of the sun, the moon, the stars, the comets and meteors, and other heavenly bodies.

Mercury, Venus, Mars, and the other planets, and the myths concerning the sun, the moon, and the rest of the celestial bodies will be the subjects of the first lecture, given Monday night. The question of the habitability of Mars and the possibility of communication with her will be features of the program.

"The Man in the Moon" is the subject of the second lecture which is scheduled for Tuesday night. It will be in the nature of a travelogue. Close-up photographs of the craters, mountain ranges, and seas of the moon will be shown in connection with this lecture. Dr. Harding will discuss the lunar influences on the earth. The sun will also be included in this lecture, emphasis being given to its relation to the earth and its chemical composition.

In the third lecture, "Signs and Wonders," comets, meteors, and shooting stars will be discussed. Dr. Harding will review the history of all of the large comets which have appeared and will explain the cause of the meteoric showers which caused so much alarm during the nineteenth century.

"The Heavens Above and the Earth Beneath" is the subject of the fourth lecture, which will tell something of the sun's travels through space, of the various constellations, and of double stars, star clusters, nebulae, other worlds in the process of formation, and the milky way.

In his fifth and last lecture, "The Origin of the Earth and the End of the World," Dr. Harding will take up the probability of life in the other worlds and will give the theories held by scientists of the past and present as to the origin of the earth. Laplace's "ring nebular theory" and Moulton's "planetesimal theory" of the earth's origin will receive special attention. In conclusion, Dr. Harding will give the ways in which the world may come to an end.

Admission to this course of unusual lectures is covered by the blanket tax, and no student can afford to miss this rare opportunity.

W. H. Blaine Publishes Paper

The first issue of a bi-monthly mimeograph publication giving interesting news about automobile men and the automotive industry in Amarillo and the Panhandle published by W. H. Blaine, secretary of the Amarillo-Panhandle Automotive Association, appeared yesterday. Among the items of news is mention of eleven tourists who called upon Secretary Blaine Monday to secure information relative to roads and other matters.

Location of the Amarillo-Haynes Motor Company, H. A. Lattimore and Roy McAllister, managers, is noted, and receipt of two car loads of automobiles by the Qualie Motor Company is mentioned. A new unloading dock and crane provided by the Santa Fe road is also regarded as one of the conveniences brought about by the Amarillo-Panhandle Automotive Association.—Amarillo News.

Concerning Lorna Doone and its Author

Richard Doddridge Blackmore was born in Berkshire, England, in 1825; was graduated from Oxford; was a lawyer by profession. "But his heart was in an outdoor life. Like his own John Ridd, in Lorna Doone, he is a man of the moors and fields, with a fresh breeze blowing over him, and a farmer's cares in his mind."

Lorna Doone was published in London in 1869. It slowly grew in favor, then leaped into popularity.

"But while the reader quarrels with a waste of precious material, Mr. Blackmore pursues his meditative way, with his smile of genial observation, himself the best of all his personages. The smell of the heather and the wild moorland odors, the honeyed grass and the fragrant thyme, the darker breathings of the sea, get into his pages, and render them fragrant."

"The scene of Lorna Doone is laid in Devonshire; and what Wordsworth did for the Lake country, Blackmore has done for the fairest county in England. The time is that of Charles II. The book is historical. It is very long, it is minute in detail and it is melodramatic, but it is alive. The strange adventures may or may not have happened, but we believe in them, for it is real life that is set before us; and whatever the author may tell us of robber caves and black hearted villains, there is nothing incredible in any of his confidences. Nothing in recent novel writing is more vivid than the contrast between these outcast nobles, the Doones, robbers and brigands, living in the wilds of Bagworthy Forest, locked fast in the hills, and peaceful farm-houses of the yeoman Ridd who lives on the Downs. This home is not idealized. From the diamond-paned kitchen come savory smells of cooking and substantial fare. Pretty Annie, "whose like had never been seen for making a man comfortable," Lizzie, who was undersized and loved books, "but knew the gift of cooking had not been vouchsafed to her by God;" the sweet homely mother, and above all the manly figure of the young giant John, make a picture of which the gloomy castle of the Doones is the shadow. And what is more charming than the story of the love that takes possession of the young boy, making a poet, a soldier, a knight of him, through a chance encounter with Lorna, the queen of the wild band, the grandchild of old Sir Ensor Doone?"

"With John Ridd—'Grit Jan'—the author dwelt till he possessed him with human attributes and made him alive. Around him the interest of the story centers. He is full of mother-wit and observation of men and things, especially of every changing mood of the nature he regards as his true mother. He is brave and resourceful, and rescues Lorna and himself from numberless difficulties by his native shrewdness. And his love is a poem, an idyll that crowns him a shepherd king in his own green pastures. Nothing that he does in his plodding, sturdy way wears us. His size, his strength, his good farming, the way he digs his sheep out of the snow, entertains us as well as his rescue of Lorna from the clan."

"Lorna Doone" is out of door England, with swift streams, treacherous bogs, dangerous cliffs, and free winds across the moors. "The story is founded on legends concerning the robber Doones, a fierce band of aristocratic outlaws, who in revenge for wrongs done them by the government, lived by plundering the country-side. Regarding their neighbors as ignoble churls and their legitimate prey, they robbed and murdered them at will. John Ridd, when a lad of fourteen, falls into their valley by chance one day, and is saved from capture by Lorna Doone, the fairest, daintiest child he had ever seen. When he is twenty-one, and the tallest and stoutest youth on Exmoor, "great John Ridd" seeks Lorna again. He hates the Doones who killed his father, but he loves beautiful innocent Lorna and becomes her protector against the fierce men among whom she lives. If slow to think, he is quick to act; if plain and unlettered, he is brave and noble; and Lorna welcomes his placid strength.

"Scattered through the swift narration, certain scenes, such as Lorna's escape to the farm, a tussle with the Doones, the attempted murder in church, the final duel with Carver Doone, and others, stand out as great and glowing pictures."

Claudia O'Keefe, an alumna of the Normal, is attending Columbia University this summer.

Mrs. Charles Clark of Teague, has returned home after a three weeks' visit with her daughter, Mary Smith Clark.

Frank Day was in Canyon recently visiting friends.

Mrs. E. Boatright of Abilene is spending the summer in Canyon with her son, Mody C. Boatright.

Examinations

Examinations now are here,—

Dear me, I've lots to do!
I've English, Math., and Physics, all,
And Spanish to review.

What would you do if you could stand
In my place for today?

Take down your books and dig and dig,
Or go out doors and play?

Say what you will, I must review:
I'll take this English, so—

Here's Shakespeare first, what did he write?

However can I know?

A universal writer, he Told things of wide import;

"Wen a Man's a Man" he gave to us,
And lyrics of that sort.

George Eliot a poet was,—
I love his works to read.

"The Lady of the Lake" is best,
"The Raven," too, I heed.

I'll try this English later on;
Let's see what Physics tells.

It's interesting, I'm sure of that;
My every fear it quells.

"How can it do that thing? you ask.
'Tis easy to explain,

Although it starts so long ago,
Back in the time of Cain.

For then you know old Edison
Gairation made a rule;

Since nothing downward now can go,
How can I fail in school?

Another man is 'most as great,
He must have lived alone;

'Tis Archimedes, bless his heart!
Who made the telephone.

Now to my Spanish I must turn,—
I like to think of it;

Since Caesar crossed the Amazon
And in the shade did sit.

His "veni, vidi, vici," too,
Is not unknown I guess;

Castilian pure it's sure to be
'Tho most of it's a mess.

But here's my Math., I do declare
I must read such a lot.

We shall report on novels three,—
There's one that I forgot.

That Tennyson did not care much
For little you and me,

He showed quite plainly when he wrote
His old geometry.

And algebra is quite as bad;
Lloyd George made a decree

That we might all solve algebra
By trigonometry.

Bring on your questions one and all—
I hear, "You shall not pass!"

Those noble words meant much in France;
They seal my fate, alas!

—Golda Gruver.

This year at the State University at Austin, twenty two members were elected to Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity.

Dr. Burma, Formerly of Dallas, has accepted the presidency of Trinity University at Waxahachie, beginning with the year 1920-21.

The Plains

Have you ever been out at night on the Plains

Where the earth seems to meet with the sky,

Have you ever heard the wild wolf bay to the moon

And seen the clouds go scudding by?

—Herman G. Lustfield, University of Michigan.

The Agricultural and Mechanical College of Texas has been listed among the twenty best military schools in the United States, according to an announcement made yesterday by the war department.

We were highly detained in Chapel last Tuesday morning.

Charles Keffer spent a few days in Canyon visiting, on his way home from the State University.

Cavis Hill has just returned home from a visit with Frank Hill in Sweetwater.

Harper Allen has just returned from Hollister, Missouri, where he attended the Y. M. C. A. convention.

Ira Allen of Petersburg spent a few days visiting friends in Canyon.

The youngest of the Texas State Normals opened this summer at Alpine with an enrollment of 42.

There are very few idle boys about Canyon, now, as the harvest season has begun.

Tip Bradford's sister, Mrs. Lon Davis, of Quanah, who has been here visiting for some time returned home Friday.

Frank Hill writes from Sweetwater that he is holding down a job in a news paper office to the tune of $100 per month.
