"Lack A Lot of Being Ready," Says Coach Burton

In preparation for their forth-coming game with Texas Tech, April 28, the Buffalo football squad is undergoing the severest sort of treatment at the hands of the W. T. mentors, Coaches S. D. Burton and Cleatice Crump. The game will be played at Lubbock.

"I have nothing to say about the team yet," Coach Burton told a Prairie reporter yesterday, "except that we lack a lot of being ready for Tech!" The pessimistic mogul was none too cheerful despite the mid-season pep shown by the club in scrimmage games last week.

Extends Contest Until June First

Two months ago The Hound and Horn, New York collegiate publication, announced a contest among the undergraduates of the United States for the best piece of prose and verse to be received by them before April first. A prize of $100 for the best short story (not to exceed 5,000 words), and a prize of $50 for the best piece of verse, (not to exceed five pages), was offered.

A great many contributions have been sent in from thirty-seven states and from as many colleges. At the present moment, say the editors, there are only two contributions which in any way seem to them worthy of attention.

In order to arrive at some more representative outcome, The Hound and Horn is extending this contest to June first in an effort to attract more distinguished contribution from undergraduates.

Colorful Pageant Depicts Stages Plains' Growth

Panhandle history was vividly and dramatically unfolded before the eyes of a large and appreciative audience assembled in the main auditorium last Friday morning. In addition to students and exes, many of the Panhandle's early settlers were seen, having come from all over West Texas to be at the opening of Pioneer Hall.

How the West was won from the red man and the buffalo; how it gradually yielded to the influx of ranchers and nesters; how its people found employment and amusement, and finally, how they were educated-all were colorfully depicted in "The Pageant of the Plains."

The Pageant was presented by the Lloyd Green Allen Scholarship Society and the Senior Class of 1933.

WELCOME BACK, MASON Mason Anderson, brother of Miss Mary Louise Anderson, assistant librarian, arrived in Canyon Friday for the week-end. He is assistant coach and an instructor in the Public Schools of Trinidad, Colo., and is a graduate of W. T.

AN "ALL-AROUND" MAN

At each rung of the climb up the educational ladder we feel the excitation of a pretty clear picture of the "all-around" man. Is that not true? Is it not also true that at each stage of the development of the mind, the "ravages of change" takes its toll and the ideals which have constituted our conceptions of manhood take the exit-route of many other childish fancies? Any picturization of an "all-'round" man can be no more than an expression of the ideals of the individual who undertakes to draw an image which the term, "all-around," automatically implies as being near perfect.

The athlete will consider an "all-around" man as a superb athlete first of all, this in spite of an attempt to be broad-minded, tolerant, and well-balanced. The artist will accentuate the tendency toward artistic tastes. The student will believe him a lover of books, and, perhaps, a crammer of knowledge. Some, especially members of the opposite sex, will look first for social graces, politeness, kindness, and feminine traits of gentleness.

Of course a logical treatment of the subject demands that he be a combination of all the virtues known to society. Such a combination might be divided into four distinct and equalized divisions: Intellect, Emotion, Vitality, and Will.

Twenty-five per cent of each, some bright-eyes has said, and we have the perfect man! To ask for that is asking too much. No perfect man, in the sense of a division on that order, has been known in modern times—and none in ancient times other than Jesus Christ. He is credited with being a "perfect man," which for our purposes here, we define as being an "all-round" man. He was, though, perfect to a relatively small proportion of the world during his lifetime. So how much dependence can we, or anyone elese, place on any portrayal of an 'all-around' man?

The "all-around" college man (supposing) will have won his cognomen because he is captain of the football team, wears a tuxedo without being conscious of a stiff collar, is president of the Student Council, relates risque jokes like a gentleman, indulges in tantaiizing repartee which gains for him the title of "Wit," never fails to make the Honor Roll, and is kind to his mother. Are there other requirements that could be made? Certainly. And several of the ones named here would not have been mentioned by fifty per cent of its readers. So what has been accomplished by setting forth an "all-around" man? Certainly, very little!

Now to prove the contention that every individual will describe the "all-'round" man prejudicial to his or her own characteristics:

Have you noticed that no mention was made of the Capacity to Earn Money? Or the Knack of Saving Money? Not one man out of ten would have overlooked that essential to what we call Success, and not one girl out of a hundred! But the writer did Perhaps he is impractical and has no money sense. But common sense tells us that no man can be an "all-around" man unless he shows the acumen which properly evaluates material wealth. Then, only, (we add in a whisper, indicating their unimportance), if he has a balance of ganization; it must grow and grow, "It was a great pleasure to me to But the elements were against me, rainbow sandwiches, and cakes ley County meet. He spent most the four attributes:

Probably the band hasn't realized it but the girls of the hall would like to give a rising vote of thanks for the music. The weather was perfect, and the music was loud enough to sound good in the rooms. The Hall would certainly like for the band to come again some time, perhaps at night, and serenade, something like "I love you truly" or "Echo in the Valley." Judge H. E. Hoover, Pioneer Panhandle Attorney, Made Chapel Address Friday; Education Never Complete, Tells Audience Fifty

No man or woman ever received a complete education in any institution of learning; yet the intellectual and moral advancement of the entire human race depends upon such institutions.

The place occupied by the great and useful men and women of today must, ere long, be surrendered to the younger generation whose minds are being now prepared and fitted to take it up just where the older ones must leave off. The foundation upon which the real education can more easily be acquired. Note the statement—"the foundation." The foundation must be first laid before the building day must, ere long, be surrendered to the younger generation whose minds are being now prepared and fitted to take it up just where the older ones must leave off. The training school can but give the foundation upon which the real education can more easily be acquired. Note the statement—"the foundation." The foundation must be first laid before the building can be erected, and the foundation is useless unless the building is erected thereon—the foundation is not the building and the building is not secure without the foundation.

and her brightest jewels are still hidden in her unfathomable bosom, and the brightest gems of human intellect yet lie dormant in the unexplored possibilities of the human intellect.

unexplored possibilities of the numan mind.

The ebb and flow of the great ocean of waters is but a type of human, moral and intellectual development—both must roll on and on ceaselessly or be lost in the vortex of its own stagnation. The waters of the lake, the pool and the pond must return to the waters of the ocean or become stagnant, from which it receives its strength and purification; the individual intellect must mix and mingle with the great masters of the past and the present, or be lost in the great whirlpool of progression; the true history of the past is the index to a higher and better life.

works will be lost. The elevation of mankind in general must come about through the efforts of the young people and their determination to do their part in shaping the lives of others and in fitting them for useful manhood and womanhood.

the lives of others and in fitting them for useful manhood and wo-manhood.

Progress is Unerding
We are living today in a great age of progression; the telegraph, the telephone, the radio and all of the means of rapid transportation and communication are bringing the world closer together for the benefit of all mankind. It is natural for us to think that in these matters we have reached the end of human possibilities. Past experience teaches us that this thought is not true.

The first steam driven road machine was invented and put to use in the year 1801. When first viewed, it was thought to be the end of perfection in that line. It was tested and failed to meet the requirements of that age. However, from this crude machine, which was then considered the highest type of perfection, we now have the steam engine, the automobile, the flying machine and all of the great inventions of the age. This crude machine stands today as the Mother of the steamship, the steam car and all steam and gas driven machinery of the present day, which have united in bringing about and bringing together the people of the earth. And in gradually uniting the people in a common cause for progression.

Change in History

These great inventions have resulted in and made possible our great national expositions wherein the works and deeds of all nations and people, from the highest and most enlightened to the primitive and most savage come together in one common cause; resulting in the advancement and betterment of all the people of the earth. As a result, we are today writing a new and different history.

Our modern history is no longer a history of war, corruption, blood-shed and greed, but today deals with the inventions of the people, their intellectual advancement and progression in all of the arts; all of which has come about and been made possible by these inventions, resulting in universal transportation of both commodities and thought among the people of the earth.

Rise of Social Humanity

History is no longer a narrative in chron mankind.

Advocates Universal Language

When we contemplate the advancement made during the last few decades, toward a better and higher life, we are bound to conclude that the time is fast approaching when the world will speak a universal language, brought about by the great inventions which have enabled all of the people of the earth to communicate directly with one another and to receive the benefit of the thoughts and experiences of each other.

May I say here that the inconvenience brought about as the result of diversity of language was is not secure without the foundation.

Advocate of Higher Learning I am persuaded that the great error committed today by a greater mass of our student body is the erroneous belief that when their school days are over, their education is complete. This belief is responsible for the many failures registered in after life by many University graduates.

Personally, I have never enjoyed the great advantage of even a college education, still I am an ardent advocate of higher educational institutions of learning like all good things, may have its own disadvantage and may do more harm than good. The great possibilities of many great minds have been wrecked by this thought, i. e., "My education is complete: I have completed the highest educational 'Curriculum', and the world is mine without further effort."

Mind is Explored

This is a progressive world, and its greatest progressive world, is mine without further effort."

Mind is Explored

French, forty million.
"The International Mind" "The International Mind"

The necessity for a universal language is further made necessary by the many universal expositions, held among the various nations of the earth, to which all countmes and people, including the savage, send their best treasures, the evidence of their industry and their advancement, showing where they commenced and the extent of their progression. History records that in the last few decades, over two thousand such international expositions have been held. The frequent gathering of distinguished scholars, men of letters, patriots and statemen, from all the different countries of the earth, are fast producing what we may justly term "The International Mind."

The increased intercourse between circlived and propagitilized and studies.

gression; the true history past is the index to a higher and better life.

Message to Youth

Should it be left to me to give but one message to the young and inquiring mind, that message would surely be that your school days can only fit you to become a greater factor in the battle of life, and to enable you to perform and do well the duties, and meet the responsibilities which you must do and assume in the battle of life; this in order to do your part in making the world a better place in which to live, and in sowing the seeds of happiness, contentment, and good fellowship among all mankind.

The young people should be educated to the point of appreciating the works of the great thinkers of the ages, otherwise these great the countries of the seeds of human kindness and impressing upon the greater and most enlightened the obligation of the strong to the weak and the learned to the unlearned and sending out to the civilized world a protest against learned and sending out to the civilized world a protest against oppression in all of its forms.

The history of the world is but a history of its people. A true history should record and make known the acts of all people, showing their progression, their state of civilization and the means and condition by which they are surrounded. By these means we see and may profit by the errors committed by others and avoid the danger thereof.

Youth Inherits Responsibility

Youth Inherits Responsibility

Youth Inherits Responsibility
The young people today must train themselves to step into the shoes of those who are now fast passing away and must fit themselves to take up and carry on the work left unfinished by those who have passed on. This means that they must advance and must do greater and better things than the things accomplished by those in whose footsteps they tread.

As heretofore stated, the fearful mistake is the thought that when the school days are over, the work is completed, when in truth and in fact the work is just begun.

truth and in fact the work is just begun.

History today is interested to know where all young people shall commence their life work, how they may best labor and by what means they can best overcome these disadvantages and bring about universal peace and prosperity, which must necessarily be the great object in view by all progressive people.

Let us here impress the young mind, with all the force at my command, that he or she who depend upon the books, entirely for an education is bound to be an ultimate failure. School books, as well as all other classes of literature, are but the record of the study, thought and experience of others and can only be a guide to direct others to greater and more ennobling deeds which the books are the fuel and the means—the transportation by which we may pass on to greater and more ennobling works for the benefit of all mankind.

a history of war, corruption, bloodshed and greed, but today deals with the inventions of the people, their intellectual advancement and progression in all of the arts; all of which has come about and been made possible by these inventions, resulting in universal transportation of both commodities and thought among the people of the earth.

Rise of Social Humanity

History is no longer a narrative in chronological order of political or military events, of bloodshed and rapine, but rather an account of the culture and advancement of the people of the whole world. Today the historian tells us about the people, their houses, furniture, customs, food; how the people make their living, what buildings they raise, what books they write, what schools they attend and how they are supported, what belief and what superstition they once held and how these were eradicated from the human mind; what amusements and what festivities

Cver smoke

Well...here it is ... already whittled FOR you. Granger Rough Cut is tobacco whittled right . . . that's one reason why it burns so slow and cool.

WHEN we started to make Granger Rough Cut we knew that fine tobacco burnt hot because it burnt so fast. It kept your pipe hot. You could hardly hold your pipe in your hand, it got so hot at times.

Then we remembered that some folks back yonder used to "whittle" their tobacco. So we made GRANGER just like "whittle" tobacco - "Rough Cut." It smokes cooler and lasts a lot longer. And also, you'll find it never gums the pipe.

So far, so good. Now we wanted to sell this tobacco for 10c. Good tobacco-right process—cut right. It was a question of how to do it for the price.

So we put GRANGER in a sensible soft foil pouch instead of an expensive package, knowing that a man can't smoke a package. We gave smokers this good GRANGER tobacco in a common-sense pouch for 10c.

GRANGER has not been on sale very long, but it has grown to be a popular smoke. And there is this much about it —we have yet to know of a man who started to smoke it, who didn't keep on. Folks seem to like it.
