TEAM WORK

Any one who enters the West Texas State Teachers College soon realizes that team work is the keynote of activity. The student body as a whole, can be compared with a machine, each one constrained to modify motion and force so as to do work.

Latin serves as an excellent training of the mental faculties. Possibly no other subject in a school curriculum except mathematics furnishes much mental stimulus, requiring such persistence and stickability, and so develops logical reasoning as does Latin.

For still another reason is Latin useful—as a help in the study of modern languages. French, Spanish, and Italian are directly derived from Latin and have many grammatical resemblances. Hence, the Latin student finds these languages very easy when he begins to study them.

These are a few of the outstanding reasons why Latin is valuable and should be studied and taught, and certainly they furnish sufficient proof for the practibility of the subject.

Mrs. Buchanan says that four fundamentals are essential in any organized body; namely, justice, courtesy, sincerity, and loyalty. Any officer should be very, very careful to bring each of these principles forward in their work, especially sincerity. As a member of a society a great responsibility is assumed as it is the duty of the audience to create an atmosphere that will be congenial and attentive; this is the most delicate responsibility of a mere member but it is the very greatest.

Many wishes have been expressed for the class to appear on the stage again, and give some more demonstrations in interpretative dancing.

Mr. Bryan's "Medicine Show" furnished the entertainment Thursday morning. The Medicine Show had been previously given for the Dramatic Club. The characters in it were: Odell Head, Jessie Barker, and Eugene Kistler. In spite of the fact that they were all Freshmen, they suggested their characters in an excellent manner. The play was strictly a character study; there was a great deal of slow action and very little conversation. The make-up of the characters was very suggestive.

On Saturday morning of last week the Cousins Literary Society entertained. Evetts Haley kept the student body in laughter for fifteen minutes with a humorous speech which he had very cleverly prepared. Herschel Coffee gave a violin solo, and the "mineralized" quartet sang several songs.

SHORT STORY STUDIED AT ELAPHEIAN MEETING

Following the devotional by the Chaplain, the Elapheian quartet presented several selections at the Society meeting Thursday. While this is a new organization in the Society, the Elapheians are enthusiastic in their support of it.

The remainder of the program was devoted to a study of the Short Story. Betty Rose Kerr told of the origin and development of the Short Story in America.
